Everyone
Welcome

A Brownsword Hall Talk

Major General Sir Sebastian Roberts

‘Bombs and Bearskins :
the Army’s Role in our Capital’

Changing the Guard at Buckingham Palace is one of the world’s best known spectacles. Whilst ceremonial events and uniforms retain their historic roots, guarding the sovereign and the capital have evolved in extraordinary ways over the centuries. Sebastian Roberts commanded the London military district from 2003 to 2007, a period which included the bombings on 7 July 2005, and helped mentor Prince William, who took over from him as Colonel of the Irish Guards. Sebastian will be reflecting on how guarding London has changed.
